World Trade Centre Club in Hong Kong. Another business meeting in Hong Kong took me to the city's World Trade Centre Club (WTCCHK). On the top floor of Hong Kong's World Trade Centre, I encountered a breathtaking view of the historic Victoria Harbour. Victoria Harbour is located between Hong Kong Island and the Kowloon peninsula in Hong Kong.

The World Trade Centre Club is also part of the IAC network and offers the ideal setting for networking. The club in Hong Kong is committed to a calm ambiance, which is ideal for business meetings. Whether you intend to hold presentations, seminars or press conferences, the WTCCHK is perfectly equipped and offers a platform for exchange among international specialists and managers alike.

There is also first-class cuisine, which I had the pleasure of trying. The dishes catering to traditional and Western tastes are equally outstanding! The World Trade Centre Club offers lunch dinner buffets for small groups, but also for large events with over 250 people.

Members can take advantage of the fitness and wellness facilities at the nearby Excelsior Hotel. The Excelsior Hotel offers an exceptional fitness and SPA area with sauna.

With headquarters in New York City, the World Trade Centers Association (WTCA) was founded in 1970 in order to promote international trade and business relations by bringing together exporters, importers, service providers and governmental bodies in different countries.

Today, WTCA is represented in more than 100 countries by its over 330 members. These WTCA members serve more than 750,000 international trading companies. As the World Trade Centre services are also offered reciprocally, the World Trade Centre Club members can access them at all operational WTCs.

A WTCCHK membership, whether a single or corporate, is always a worthwhile investment in order to be one step ahead individually or as a company.

Summary:

The World Trade Centre Club in Hong Kong is the perfect platform for specialists and managers. With its breathtaking view, it also offers the perfect venue for private and business events.
